Dual degree program with MGIMO University in Post-Soviet Public Policy

- My research focuses on determining whether the war between Russia and Ukraine is a doomed one or an artificial crisis through the lens of hostile perception, and a range of qualitative methods will be employed to achieve this goal.
- One of the primary methods I am using is conducting elite interviews with individuals from both Russia and Ukraine and foreigners who have extensive knowledge and experience on this matter. Through these interviews, I hope to gain a deeper understanding of the ideological factors driving the conflict since 2013, as well as potential pathways towards resolution.
- I am also analyzing a range of secondary sources, including academic literature, news articles, and government reports, to develop a comprehensive understanding of the conflict.

Thesis: Problems and Prospects of Turkmenistan's Natural Gas Export

- In my thesis, I proposed that Turkmenistan's natural gas exportation is highly sensitive to geopolitics and the global trend towards decarbonization.
- To address these challenges, I advocated for a multifaceted approach that emphasizes the expansion of export routes through a combination of diplomatic and technological solutions.
- Specifically, I recommended that Turkmenistan pursue a range of initiatives, including facilitating negotiations with Azerbaijan on trade deal agreements, securing the construction of the TAPI pipeline, investing in the development of LNG and blue hydrogen, and enhancing the stability of current gas production and transportation.

Thesis: Citizenship Education of Turkmenistan under Niyazov: How Personality Cult Becomes National Will

- This thesis explores the role of personality cult in shaping citizenship education in Turkmenistan during the presidency of Saparmurat Niyazov.
